7 DAYS E-FDP PROGRAMME ON

Emerging Prospects of STEM Education in Engineering and Technology

21st - 28th, July 2020

Objective

Science and Technology play a critical role in the development of a nation. The conventional approach in teaching various science subjects and mathematics at the foundational level is to equip the learners with the concepts and methods of the subjects in a rather exclusive manner. This has generally led to the development of linear thought processes which preclude, if not impede the learners from applying their foundational knowledge of science and mathematics in creative resolution of the real world problems. The basic concept of integrating Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics- generally abbreviated as the STEM, is rooted in the idea of developing an interdisciplinary approach in teaching and learning of science and mathematics. The objective is to create a sense of appreciation and ability in the learners for application of science and mathematics in engineering and technology as a natural outcome of the educational process related to the foundational subjects of science and mathematics. The present program is embedded in this philosophy of STEM education

From 12pm, next session started in D Royal Auditorio which started with a short movie screening on "World Water Crisis". It depicted the issue of water crisis in various cities of the world and highlighted the importance of 'valuing water'. After this, the senior Professor of the Department of Geography and Dean Students Welfare Prof. B.S Mipun gave a short speech about conservation and proper utilization of water. He also explains the depletion of underground water and added the importance of knowing about the water crisis so that we can achieve the target of universal access to safe and clean drinking water by 2030. The event proceeded with speech by the Vice Chancellor, Prof. S.P Singh where he spoke about the dependence of flora and fauna kingdom on water and the concerning issue of change in water cycle and environmental phenomena which aids to the global water issue. He also talked about water problems of Gomti river that happened back in 1993 during his first research on water and encouraged the students to work on researches that reflects on community service. Moreover, he also highlighted some facts on global water issues and shared few rules to follow to reduce the water wastage at home, such as closing the tap while not in use, avoid using plastic bags and proper management of solid and liquid waste. At the end, he mentioned about the Sustainable Development Goal 6 that calls for ensuring universal access to safe and affordable drinking water and sanitation for all. Then the students of UG 6th and PG 4th of the Department of Geography performed a street play on water crisis, followed by a Group Song, sang by Faith Ch. Momin of PG 4th and her team.

In the end, the coordinator of the Department of Geography, Dr. Annesha Borah gave the vote of thanks and concluded the event. Thus, the programme ended successfully.

Workshop on
REIMAGINING BRAHMAPUTRA
Beyond Risks and Towards Values

Hosted by
THE ASSAM ROYAL GLOBAL UNIVERSITY

Supported by
INDIAN NATIONAL SCIENCE ACADEMY

8TH & 9TH JUNE, 2023 | VENUE: UNIVERSITY CAMPUS

At the very outset, we wish to introduce ourselves as a State Private University, established by the State Legislative Assembly of Assam by an Act. The University started its first academic session from July 2017 and is now offering more than 130 programmes under its 26 constituent schools to approx. four thousand students. Over the last five years, our university has carved a strong niche in the realm of higher education in the Northeast India. Our vision is to evolve into an institute of excellence with global recognition. Our mission is to contribute to the nation building process through our untiring endeavour towards excellence in teaching, learning and research.

With great pleasure I have the honour to inform you that The Assam Royal Global University, Guwahati is hosting a Two-Day Workshop on "Reimagining Brahmaputra: Beyond Risks and Towards Values" on 8th and 9th June 2023, supported by the Indian National Science Academy, New Delhi.

The river Brahmaputra is currently imagined as a risk or threat inviting 'control'. Such a policy approach is likely to fail more often than it succeeds as it limits creativity, facilitates hubris, and is 'blindsided' by counterintuitive results (Tenner, 1996), Knowledge is accumulating from an Earth Science perspective that the incidences of flood and riverbank erosion in the Brahmaputra basin are a result of the complex interdependence of earthquake, sediment load and changes to the width-to-depth ratio of the channel with some impact from particularly large floods. It is also becoming clear that engineering solutions for flood 'control' have been less successful than hoped (Wasson et al., 2020). Therefore, maintaining human well-being in this waterscape of 'floodplains-sandbars-river islands (chars and saporis)-multi-channelled river' seems to be a moving target for policymaking rather than a fixed goal. The dynamic nature of this waterscape demands exploration from multiple perspectives, a structured dialogue process, and human creativity for designing 'systemically desirable and culturally feasible' interventions for human well-being and resilience (Varma and Mishra, 2017). Single solutions are not effective. Such a paradigm shift may give us a better opportunity to identify leverage points for resilience building for communities in the dynamic waterscape of Brahmaputra.

STAKEHOLDERS:

There are four interest groups regarding policy issues for the Brahmaputra River:

a) those who approach problem-solving with an engineering frame and are influential in policymaking,

b) those seeking alternative models for development and risk management,

c) those exploring the dynamics of floodplains and river channels through a hydro-geomorphology frame, and

d) those focused on the struggle for resources and social identity through a political-economy frame.

A workshop is proposed to bring these key stakeholders together to engage in constructive dialogue, identify values and services provided by the river, and manage them effectively along with opportunities and challenges.

OBJECTIVES OF THE WORKSHOP:

The workshop will have two objectives:

1) a whitepaper on an alternative to the risk paradigm for resilience building in the Brahmaputra waterscape with a clear operational framework and

2) creating a network to support the adoption of this framework for policy and practice and operationalize demonstration projects.

Emerging Prospects of STEM
Education in Engineering and Technology

21st- 28th, July 2020

Objective

Science and Technology play a critical role in the development of a nation. The conventional approach in teaching various science subjects and mathematics at the foundational level is to equip the learners with the concepts and methods of the subjects in a rather exclusive manner. This has generally led to the development of linear thought processes which preclude, if not impede the learners from applying their foundational knowledge of science and mathematics in creative resolution of the real world problems. The basic concept of integrating Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics- generally abbreviated as the STEM, is rooted in the idea of developing an interdisciplinary approach in teaching and learning of science and mathematics. The objective is to create a sense of appreciation and ability in the learners for application of science and mathematics in engineering and technology as a natural outcome of the educational process related to the foundational subjects of science and mathematics. The present program is embedded in this philosophy of STEM education

Topic of the Program: Narratives of Culture

Culture is an integral part of how a story is both told and understood. Cultural narratology is a broad spectrum of perspectives giving representation to all forms of life on earth. Interdisciplinary in nature, the term 'culture' shapes up a graffiti of ways of living, and the interactions between them, thereby resulting in its growth, as culture is not static. It is an integrated configuration of human knowledge, convictions, and behaviour.

Culture and literature are inherently related in that literature is a product of culture, and culture lives and percolates down generations in its literary narratives. However, narratives of culture could come from disciplines as diverse as literature, aesthetics, anthropology, ecology/nature, cognitive studies, comics, folklore, myth, film, game studies, gender, history, language, memory studies, popular culture, sociology, visual culture, music, performance studies etc.

ABOUT CIKS, IIT G:

The Center for Indian Knowledge Systems envisages to put into place a research-development-practice paradigm of Indian knowledge systems that could play a vital role in enriching education. Its mission is to create new knowledge and skills to build capacity for a sustainable knowledge system. This paradigm advocates progress tempered with environmental conservation and respect for ecologically sustainable practices. By using a scientific process that is rigorous and systemic, research in these knowledge systems will then be disseminated into cutting edge professional development programs. The Center for Indian Knowledge Systems will focus on several different research and practice areas that will evolve as the Center grows and formulates over the several years.
