1. Prince C. P., Johnson X. Palackappillil CMI and John Johnson (2004). The Charismatic Retreats and Psychological Maladjustments, International Journal of Professional Social Work, Bangalore, Vol:1; Issue:1-2; 37-45

Significance- It is a quantitative study using quasi experimental design using pre and post assessment among a group of 5000 participants in catholic charismatic retreat held at Divine Retreat Centre Chalakkudy, Kerala in 2002. The study shows significant correlation between the participants in charismatic retreats and the reduction in psychological maladjustments. The study highlights the significance the role of spirituality in the treatment process of those persons affected by psychological maladjustments.

2. Prince C. P (2005). Psychosocial Rehabilitation of People with Multiple Disabilities, Journal of School Social Work, Chennai Vol:1; Issue:08; 15-18

Significance- The article is based on scientific study based on secondary data sources, and the reports of rehabilitation centre at NIMHANS, Bangalore. It explains the roles of Psychiatric Social Worker in giving psychosocial support to persons with multiple disabilities and the role of care givers for the welfare of the clients.

3. Prince C. P (2015). Psychiatric Social Work Intervention in Prolonged Grief Disorder; Case study in Indian context, February 2015, PEARL Multidisciplinary Journal: St Philomena's Exclusive Academic Research and Learning - A Bi-annual Multidisciplinary Peer Reviewed Research Journal, St. Philomena College, Puttur, ISSN: 2394-0352, 1 (1), 49-56.

Significance- It is a paper based on qualitative research design using case study method. The unresolved grief of the loss of the loved one were falsely diagnosed as Bipolar disorder and treated but later diagnosed as pathological grief and given Psychiatric Social Work intervention leading to remittance of the problem. The significance of the study indicates the role of social workers in giving psycho social care in grief cases both in individual loss and for survivors in a disaster situation.

4. Prince C. P (2015). Behavioural Implications in Impoverishment of the Subaltern Sustainable Livelihood Models, August 2015, PEARL Multidisciplinary Journal: St Philomena's Exclusive Academic Research and Learning - A Bi-annual Multidisciplinary Peer Reviewed Research Journal, St. Philomena College, Puttur, ISSN: 2394-0352, 1 (2), 115-129

Significance- It is a conceptual paper to analyse the behavioural implications in the perpetuation of poverty and consequently failure in sustainability of livelihood means. Educational illiteracy, growing unemployment, geographical and climatic hit backs add to the menace. The paper calls for studies on prevailing structures and the need for social work intervention in terms of public participation towards social enterprises and social innovations to tackle the unsustainable nature of livelihood models of the poor. Extracts of interview with community leaders are added to support the theoretical framework. Social work methods, particularly community organization must focus upon this area to find suitable remedy.

5. Prince C. P. (2015). Process and outcome dimensions of social innovation in the rehabilitation of the differently abled-concept paper, ADELAIDE Journal of Social Work, Roshniniyaya, Mangalore, ISSN: 2349-4123, 2 (1), 56-68

Significance- This conceptual paper is based on qualitative study to explore the social innovation venture applied to the rehabilitation of the differently abled through the individual initiatives inspired by faith dimensions of the Catholic Church that has lasted over a period of twenty years in the State of Kerala and outside. This rehabilitation activity is done by ordinary individuals without any professional expertise but with the support of people of Goodwill in the community. The process and outcome of such social innovation needs to be explored to find out the motivating drives which makes this programme sustainable. The personal and familial dedications also come under the purview of the study.

6. Prince C P., P K Shajahan (2016). Social Innovation in the Community Rehabilitation of the People with Mental Illness: Cases of Faith Based Initiatives, February 2016, PEARL – Multidisciplinary Journal: St Philomena’s Exclusive Academic Research and Learning - A Bi-annual Multidisciplinary Peer Reviewed Research Journal, St. Philomena College, Puttur, ISSN: 2394-0352, 2 (1), 50-71

Significance- The paper is the outcome of the pilot study conducted on the theme as part of the doctoral research of the first author where the study adopted a Grounded Theory Approach and Methodology to analyse and theorise the processes and outcomes of such initiatives. Being a qualitative study a conceptual framework is given to such home based social innovation rooted in faith based dimensions with social value creation for ensuring sustainability leading to a social mission. The committed and sustained involvement of the community and the neighbourhood generated an innovative model for care of the mentally challenged. The preliminary results of the pilot study brings out new relationships and innovative drives and motivations exceptional to the traditional philanthropic methods as well as professional care and rehabilitation approaches thereby characterising social innovation in care giving and rehabilitation of the mentally ill.
